Cattle Conversations: Online Program

Kansas State Research and Extension has kicked off their Cattle Conversations online programs. These programs have been held every Thursday in February at 10:00 am. The first week, they covered a program that was presented by Dr. Gregg Hanzlecek on understanding pregnancy loss. The second week was presented by Dr. Dale Blasi on cow nutrition around late gestation through peak lactation. These previous programs have been recorded and are available at the River Valley Extension District website, www.rivervalley.ksu.edu. The next topics and dates for these programs are:

- February 18th – Calf health from birth to branding with Dr. AJ Tarpoff
- February 25th – Semen and sire selection with Clint Laflin

To join the upcoming meetings, go to bit.ly/CattleConversations and provide us your name and email. A link will then be sent to the email that you provided to join the meetings. We want these programs to be educational and interactive. If you have questions during the program, we will certainly answer them. If you have any questions or need help signing up, please call Brett Melton, River Valley District Livestock Agent, at 785-243-8185 or email at bmelton@ksu.edu.
